NOWADAYS, the problems of humanity encountered in local, regional and on the global scale have been increasingly the focus of daily conversations. Some people of privileged social positions venture solutions for global peace.

Whether we are aware or not, it is one of the obligations as a global citizen. It is in the nature of human beings to ensure that peace and security are guaranteed.

The main apprehension here is not limited to the conflicts and wars in different parts of the world which have affected the balance of regional and global peace. Rather, they include mostly disputes, misinterpretation of the nature of relations added with ethnic, racial and religious phobias among the world's diverse communities.

We should look at a book titled 'The Wisdom of Tolerance: A Philosophy of Generosity and Peace,' written by the late Abdurrahman Wahid, the first directly-elected Indonesian president and Japanese philosopher Daisaku Ikeda, the third leader of the Japanese Buddhist community group Soka Gakkai, a branch of Nichiren Buddhism, 13 years ago.

The book emphasises the saliency and urgency of constructive dialogue to achieve a significant level of peace in diverse societies. Translated into Bahasa Malaysia and titled 'Hikmah Toleransi: Falsafah Kepemurahan dan Keamanan by the international Institute of Islamic Thought and Civilisation, it is a good starting point in the process of thinking about a possibility of rebalancing the global understanding of different communities and of peace.

It is based on the sincere "dialogue" and "conversation" between the two distinguished thinkers in the Asia-Pacific region, namely, the late Wahid, popularly known as Gus Dur, and Ikeda. Both shared a major concern on global peace especially the scope of threats and dangers felt by societies.

This book represents a model to all of us on how to act rationally amid the widespread global problems threatening humanity. The concept of dialogue does not merely signify a talking session between relevant parties but a need for daily actions and deeds in public-personal relationships.

As argued by the respective parties, "wisdom" and "tolerance" are not inclusive to any single religious system, rather they are shared as a fundamental essence of all religious belief systems. There is a need to prioritise dialogue sessions comprising all segments of society.
