

This book constitutes a study of Southeast Asia, discussing the Malay world's long historical connection with the Muslim people including the Rumi-Turks, Ḥaḍramīts and the Ottomans. These connections reflect religious, political and legal cooperations. It also discusses the Ottomans' policy of pan-Islamism and the role of Sultan Abdulhamid II in improving ties with the Malay world and their scholars, rulers and heritage, in the fight against Western colonial powers. In seven essays, the contributors to this book discuss the early religious-intellectual network in the region as well as the evolution of the judicial and political systems.

Dr Saim Kayadibi is lecturer at the International Islamic University, Malaysia. Born in Turkey, he studied at Al-Azhar University and at the University of Jordan, and obtained his PhD from Durham University, UK. He has published numerous books and articles and has taught Islamic law in Turkey and the UK. His other areas of interest include Islamic legal theory and jurisprudence, Muslim international law, human rights and democracy, Sufism, and philosophy of Rumi. He is also author of Istihsān: The Doctrine of Juristic Preference in Islamic Law (Islamic Book Trust, 2010).

Acknowledgement

All praise is due to Allah, who blessed us with the opportunity to complete this humble book. In advance, I would like to express my deepest thanks and appreciation to all individuals and organizations that contributed, either directly or indirectly, to this book's production. Special thanks must go to the chapter contributors: Prof Dr Ahmet Akgündüz (rector, University of Rotterdam), Dr Mehmet Özay (lecturer, Faculty of Islamic Civilization and Thought, University Technology Malaysia), Assoc. Prof Dr Servet Bayındır (lecturer, Department of Islamic Jurisprudence, Faculty of Theology, Istanbul University), Nurulwahidah Binti Fauzi (Ph.D. student, Department of Islamic History and Civilization, Academy of Islamic Studies, University of Malaya), and Assoc. Prof Dr Ali Mohammad (lecturer, Department of Islamic History and Civilization, Academy of Islamic Studies, University of Malaya).

I would like to take this opportunity to thank Professor Dr Ahmad Hidayat Buang (director, Academy of Islamic Studies, University of Malaya) for his generous support for the research related to this book and also for being a co-researcher; Professor Dr Saffet Köse (lecturer, Department of Islamic Jurisprudence, Selçuk University); the Research Centre of the University of Malaya (IPPP) for research funding; to my dear friend and "abi" Jay Willoughby, who copyedited the book; and to the Islamic Book Trust staff and its respected director Hj. Koya for his exceedingly helpful cooperation and keen interest in publishing the manuscript. Without his contribution, this book could not have been finalized.

Southeast Asia, especially the Malay Archipelago, has enjoyed a long historical connection with Muslim Rumi (Turkish), Ḥaḍramī Arab, and Ottoman traders as can be seen in the two regions' framework of religious, political, and legal cooperation. The Ottomans' pan-Islam policy and the mission of Sultan Abdulhamid II enabled the archipelago to play an active role and thus increase its relationships with Muslim scholars, rulers, and legal heritages elsewhere when it was confronted with European colonialism. The network of Johor-Ottoman and Ḥaḍramī Muslim relationships, as well as the role of Sultan Abu Bakar of Johor, strengthened bilateral connections. The translation of the Majallah al-Aḥkām (Ottoman Legal Codes) into Malay also served to develop legal practice of Islamic law in Malay Shari'ah courts.

The seven articles contained in this collection discuss and analyze selected topics related to the Ottoman and Malay legal structures and development. Chapter 1, "The Religious-Intellectual Network: The Arrival of Islam in the Archipelago" by Nurulwahidah Binti Fauzi, Ali Mohammad, and Saim Kayadibi, elaborates upon the network existing between the 'ulamā' and the ruler of Johor during the twentieth century, including its historical background. The researchers indicate that ever since Islam appeared in seventh-century Arabia, Arab society has continued to influence Asian societies. After Islam's arrival in Southeast Asia, a number of records were found that present a still incomplete picture of the mix of formal and/or non-formal relationships between the Arabs and the Chinese, Indians, Persians, and Turks. The authors focus on Islam's arrival and the Malays' relationship with Muslims, especially the Ottomans and Arab Ḥaḍramīs.

In "Baba Davud: A Turkish Scholar in Aceh," Mehmet Özay presents the scholar Shaikh Davud b. Ismail b. Mustafa ar-Rumi, generally known as Baba Davud or Mustafa ar-Rumi, who was a caliph of the well-known Acehnese religious scholar Abdurrauf as-Singkili (Teungku Syiah Kuala). One of his works, the Risālah Masā'il al-Muhtadi li Ikhwanil Muhtadi, has been taught at Islamic institutions in Aceh and around the Malay world. It is hoped that his article will make a significant contribution to Ottoman-Malaysian studies. The third chapter, "A Preliminary Note on 'Dayah Tanoh Abee,'" also by Mehmet Özay, describes this centre's famous zāwiyah that is located in Seulimum, a subdistrict of the Acehnese capital of Banda Aceh. Its importance is considered to be based on its founding family's origin, the connection between the Sultanate of Aceh Darussalam and the Ottoman empire, and its contribution to Islamizing Southeast Asia.

The Ottomans made a significant contribution to the development of legal matters in Islamic law. With this point in mind, Prof Dr Ahmed Akgündüz enriches the value of this book with his "Legal Developments in Ottoman State (1299-1926)." This important research article, which appears as chapter 4, outlines the course of legal developments before the Tanzimat Reforms (699-1255/1299-1839) and during the Post-Tanzimat Period (1255-1345/1839-1926).

Chapter 5, Saim Kayadibi's "Evolution of the Muslim Judicial System," investigates this topic by analyzing the effect of those social, cultural, political, and historical elements that shaped the role of both jurists and courts in secular and non-secular environments. In the modern period, most Muslim-majority countries steadily adopted western legal systems and institutions due to the economic and political influence of their colonial masters. Chapter 6, featuring Servet Armağan's "Fiqh Education at Ottoman Madrasahs: A Case of Süleymaniye Madrasahs," evaluates the science of fiqh (Islamic jurisprudence) among the systematic sciences and its place in legal history. The emergence of madrasahs and the importance of Süleymaniye madrasahs among the Ottoman educational institutions, along with their main resources and methods of teaching, are analyzed according to both furu' al-fiqh and uṣūl al-fiqh individually.

The seventh (and final) chapter, Saim Kayadibi's "Judicial Pluralism in the Malaysian Legal System", investigates this intriguing subject. Malay society, which is well-known for allowing others to live according to their own cultural values and traditions, believes that diversity is a source of cultural and social wealth. This can be seen in Malaysia's extraordinary freedom and richness in both legal and cultural matters, traits that it shares with Ottoman society. Malay society has apparently interiorized the value of diversity, which fosters peace, freedom, tolerance, and strength among different groups. Its legal system has been shaped by external forces: Islamic law (via the Muslims' request) and the legal systems of colonial Europe (by force). In contrast, the country's courts used the Ottoman empire's Majallah al-Aḥkām al-‘Adliyyah, the Ḥanafi code of Qadri Pasha (later called the Majallah Aḥkām Johor), and the Undang-undang Sivil Islam as the main sources for judicial rulings. In this article, Kayadibi explores the Malay legal system's evolution in relation to constitutional law, indigenous customary law and tribal legal systems, Shari‘ah and civil court procedures, first contacts with Islamic law, the influence of colonial law, as well as the Ottoman-Malay connection and strong relationships.

It is hoped that this humble work will contribute to the heritage of Malay-Turk relations as well as that of other Muslim nations.

Allah knows best. Praise be to Him, the Lord of the heavens, planets and all that exists.
