ABSTRACT

Radio frequency identification (RFID) is the latest technology for automatic identification, which allows the transmission of a unique serial number wirelessly. Power control module of RFID reader is used to perform digital signal processing techniques and procedures over the received data from the RFID readers. A high linearity CMOS RF (radio frequency) power amplifier has the advantage of being low-cost and easily integrated on chip. It has become the smart technology of choice for wireless devices (RFID readers). This work demonstrates a 3.3V single voltage self-biased 2.4GHz - 2.5GHz high linearity RF power amplifier for RFID applications. The proposed amplifier achieved 81.1 dB gain, output power at P_{1dB} -4.0 dBm, 1-dB gain compression power with 10.0% power efficiency (PE) and 17.4% power-added efficiency (PAE). Furthermore, high linearity with 1.6dBc for IM3, -6.633dBm and -2.887dBm third-order intercept point IIP3 and OIP3 at frequency of 2.45GHz is also measured. The Adjacent Channel Power Ratio (ACPR) has been achieved -7.26dBc for input port and -1.0dBc for output port. The amplifier also exhibited very good isolation of 2.85dB, the insertion loss of 0.8dB and return loss of 9.94dB. Simulations were conducted using Mentor Graphic software tools.

1. INTRODUCTION

The 2.45GHz ISM band is very important for RFID applications. RFID applications have driven the demand for personal wireless communications terminals, and these items need to be low cost, low operating voltage and have small size [1]. Power amplifier is a key device in these (power control module) systems. It is also one of the highest energy-consuming components. Therefore, it is important that the power amplifier is properly designed so that it does not adversely load the system. Among the key criteria of the power amplifier is being power efficiently. To improve power added efficiency (PAE), an RF power amplifier can be operated in high efficient modes such as class-B, class-E, and class-F. However, these high efficiency amplifiers have nonlinearity, which result in unacceptable adjacent channel power ratio. In order to satisfy the linearity requirement, power amplifiers are typically operated in linear Class-A or Class-AB configurations [2]. However, these power amplifiers have low power efficiency. The gain should be increased to improve PAE using the same supply voltage. To increase the overall power amplifier gain, the number of stages in PA must be increased and decrees the chip size, as well as idle bias currents as well.

In this paper, a 3.3V single voltage self-biased 2.4-2.5GHz two stage RF power amplifier has been proposed to satisfy the specification for 81.1dB high gain, the 1-dB gain compression output power of -4.0dBm high linearity. Fig.1 shows the core topology of whole stages proposed power amplifier.
