The Life of Place

Spaces, Places and Narratives

The book is a collection of selected case studies predominantly in Malaysia and an international case study in New Zealand that examines people's experiences in public spaces. The public spaces gathered in this book include street markets, parks, historical sites, open spaces, coastal areas and cities. Written from the perspective of people's experiences and responses towards the selected public spaces, the aim of the book is to share their narratives as users, as a way of guiding designers and planners how they might re-think about engaging with places and people.

KHALILAH ZAKARIYA has an academic background in landscape architecture and tourism planning. She received her Bachelor of Landscape Architecture (Honours) from International Islamic University Malaysia, Master of Science in Tourism Planning from Universiti Teknologi Malaysia, and her PhD was obtained from RMIT University, Australia. Her research explores the relationships between space, culture and tourism, with a particular interest on how we experience and design everyday places in the city. She is currently an Assistant Professor at the Department of Landscape Architecture, Kulliyah of Architecture and Environmental Design, International Islamic University Malaysia.

NOR ZALINA HARUN is currently an Assistant Professor at the Department of Landscape Architecture, Kulliyah of Architecture and Environmental Design, International Islamic University Malaysia. She obtained her PhD from Universiti Teknologi Malaysia (UTM).

NURHAYATI ABDUL MALEK obtained her PhD from Universiti Putra Malaysia (UPM), majoring in Parks and Recreation Management. She also holds a Masters degree from University of South Australia (UniSA) in Recreation Planning and Management as well as a Bachelor in Landscape Architecture from Universiti Teknologi MARA (UiTM). Currently, a lecturer in the Department of Landscape Architecture, Kulliyah of Architecture and Environmental Design, IIUM. She is also a Registered Landscape Architect with the Institute of Landscape Architects Malaysia (ILAM).

MAZLINA MANSOR (PhD, Landscape Architecture, Universiti Teknologi Malaysia) is an Assistant Professor at the Department of Landscape Architecture, Kulliyah of Architecture and Environmental Design, International Islamic University Malaysia. Her area of research is on human ecology, environment and behaviour. Research interests include investigation on humans' perceptions, behaviours and their relationships with urban natural places, experiential landscape, people attachment to places, and meaning of space and place. She is currently working on research on how urban nature can fulfil biophilic and social interactions needs of urban residents, and its relationship to health promotion of urban community.
