Intellectual Discourse

Volume 27 Number 2 2019

Editor
Ishtiaq Hossain (Malaysia)

Associate Editors
Syed Farid Alatas (Singapore)
Thameem Ushama (Malaysia)

Editorial Board
Abdul Kabir Hussain Solihu (Nigeria)
Badri Najib Zubir (Malaysia)
Daniel J. Christie (USA)
Habibul H. Khondker (UAE)
Hazizan Md. Noon (Malaysia)
Hussain Mualib (Singapore)
Ibrahim M. Zein (Qatar)
James D. Frankel (China)
Kenneth Christie (Canada)
Nor Faridah Abdul Manaf (Malaysia)
Rahmah Bt Ahmad H. Osman (Malaysia)
Serdar Demirel (Turkey)
Syed Farid Alatas (Singapore)
Thameem Ushama (Malaysia)

International Advisory Board
Anis Malik Thoha (Indonesia)
Chandra Muzaffar (Malaysia)
Fahimul Quadir (Canada)
Habib Zafarullah (Australia)
John O. Voll (USA)
Muhammad al-Ghazali (Pakistan)
Muhammad K. Khalifa (Qatar)
Redzuan Othman (Malaysia)

Founding Editor
Afar Afaq Ansari (USA)

Intellectual Discourse is a highly respected, academic refereed journal of the International Islamic University Malaysia (IIUM). It is published twice a year by the IIUM Press, IIUM, and contains reflections, articles, research notes and review articles representing the disciplines, methods and viewpoints of the Muslim world.

ISSN 0128-4878 (Print); ISSN 2289-5639 (Online)

http://journals.iium.edu.my/intdiscourse/index.php/islam
Email: intdiscourse@iium.edu.my; intdiscourse@yahoo.com

Published by:
IIUM Press, International Islamic University Malaysia
P.O. Box 10, 50728 Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia
Phone (+603) 6196-5014, Fax: (+603) 6196-6298
Website:http://iiumpress.iium.edu.my/bookshop
Contents

Editorial Note
Ishtiaq Hossain
329

Research Articles

Higher Education in Turkey: Responding to Sustainable Development Agenda
Cihat Atar and Shukran Abdul Rahman
335

Quality Assurance in Higher Education in the Maldives: Past, Present, and Future
Mariyam Shahuneeza Naseer and Dawood Abdulmalek Yahya Al-Hidabi
353

Who Sets The Agenda? Locating the Formation of Public Opinion during the Rantau By-Election
Shafizan Mohamed and Syed Arabi Idid
373

The Socio-Political Context behind the Malayan Insurgency, 1948-1960
Dina Murad
397

Islam and Sport: From Human Experiences to Revelation
Baidruel Hairiel Abd Rahim, Nurazzura Mohamad Diah, Haizuran Mohd Jani, and Abdul Sham Ahmad
413

Factors Driving the Intention to Adopt a Tobacco-free Policy among Employees in a Public Higher Education Institution
Kamaruzzaman Abdul Manan, Che Mahzan Ahmad, Aini Maznina A. Manaf, and Ahmad Shalihin Mohd Samin
431

Violations of Basic Rights of Prisoners In Conventional and Islamic Law: Theory and Practice
Mohammed Farid Ali al-Fijawi, Maulana Akbar Shah @ U Tun Aung, and Muneer Kuttiyani Muhammad
455
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Authors</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Charismatic Political Leadership and Tun Dr Mahathir Mohamad’s Malaysia: Power, Control, Stability and Defence</td>
<td>Suleyman Temiz, and Arshad Islam</td>
<td>475</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Johann Wolfgang von Goethe: A life With Islām.</td>
<td>Francesca Bocca-Aldaqre</td>
<td>507</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Major Trends in the Historiography of Muslim Reformism in Pre-Independent Malaysia</td>
<td>Hafiz Zakariya</td>
<td>531</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Critical Analysis of Islamic Council of Europe: From a Juristical and Islamic Legal Maxim Perspective</td>
<td>Ali Ahmed Zahir</td>
<td>555</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kashmir between India Pakistan: The Unfinished Agenda</td>
<td>Abdul Rashid Moten</td>
<td>577</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smart Contract in Blockchain: An Exploration of Legal Framework in Malaysia</td>
<td>Nor Razinah Binti Mohd. Zaina, Engku Rabiah Adawiah Engku Alib, Adewale Abideenc, and Hamizah Abdul Rahmand</td>
<td>595</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>South-South Cooperation: A Case Study of Contemporary Sudanese-Malaysian Relations</td>
<td>Garoot Suleiman Eissa, Elfatih Abdullahi Abdelsalam, and Mohamad Fuzi Bin Omar</td>
<td>619</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Diplomatic Ties Between Malaysia and the Holy See: A Symbol of Mutual Respect, Inter-Religious Coexistence and International Cooperation</td>
<td>Roy Anthony Rogers</td>
<td>643</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Review Article

The Arab Uprisings and Worldwide Responses: A Review of the Literature
Mohd Irwan Syazli Saidin
665

Book Review

Identity: Contemporary Identity Politics and the Struggle for

Syaza Farhana Binti Mohammad Shukri

Mahmood Hossain
Famous for his declaration on the end of history after free-market liberal economy triumphed over communism at the end of the Cold War, Francis Fukuyama is back to elucidate on the recent rise of identity politics in the second decade of the twenty-first century. Starting with the vote by the British electorate to leave the European Union, we have seen the rise of more populist leaders such as Donald Trump, Viktor Orban, and Geert Wilders using the rhetoric of identity to rile up voters. While there is a growing body of literature on the subject, what Fukuyama does best is explaining a complex phenomenon in a simple yet elegant prose to make his arguments digestible to a wider audience and thus, helping him make a case on the danger of ignoring identity politics and its roots.

Identity politics is any civil movement that is spearheaded by people with shared experiences based on a social construct whether it be race, religion, gender, or sexual orientation. While the twentieth century saw class conflict taking centre stage, the struggle now has evolved to be between people with different social identities. As Fukuyama pointed out, this is a natural evolution because there has been a gap in our understanding of human motivation. Why would developed countries such as the United States and the United Kingdom experience the rise of discontented voters? While economics has been understood as human desire for maximum utilization, there is a desire that cannot be met in material terms—dignity. Fukuyama talks about the politics of resentment whereby “a political leader has mobilized followers around the perception that the group’s dignity has been affronted, disparaged, or otherwise disregarded. This resentment engenders demands for public recognition of the dignity of the group in question.” (p. 7). The argument is that while free-market economy has brought countries and people out of poverty, it has not successfully made the middle-class politically and socially visible. This feeling of marginalization is the glue that has mobilized people across specific countries.

Identity is not just a book on politics, but it is also an abridged philosophical and historical reference on the development of the modern man since the Enlightenment. For that reason, it is easy to follow Fukuyama’s argument on the concept of thymos, its relation to Rousseau’s idea of man and society, and how human conception of the self has changed with the slow decay of religious authority in the West. Although as a species we have had more liberties to choose our form of existence today, it has also led to anxiety and insecurity because our identity is still tied to our own understanding of society. Fukuyama writes:

> This crisis of identity leads in the opposite direction from expressive individualism, to the search for a common identity that will re-bind the individual to a social group and re-establish a clear moral horizon. This psychological fact lays the groundwork for nationalism. (p. 56)

It is, therefore, not surprising to see the current rise of populist nationalism in which leaders utilize nationalist rhetoric to gain the people’s trust to supposedly bring a country back to its purported former glory. People have been too detached in the modern world that they are now seeking commonality that used to exist in the form of national or religious identity.

On the outset, this book might appear to discuss a uniquely western phenomenon. However, the author makes a good point to emphasize that current identity politics is not just one of nationalism, but it also incorporates the ongoing debate on religious extremism, specifically Muslim radicals, whether they are in Europe or the Middle East. Of course, this is not a new argument, for scholars on political Islam have been proposing the idea of the marginalized Muslims that lies behind the anger towards their own government and the West. What is unique about this chapter called “Nationalism and Religion” is how Fukuyama situates this possibly separate issue into a wider discussion on identity politics that is affecting humanity as history unfolds today. Nationalism and Islamism “both provide an ideology that explains why people feel lonely and confused, and both peddled in victimhood that lays the blame for an individual’s unhappy situation on groups of outsiders.” (p. 73). Understanding this would allow policymakers to approach Islamism as a psycho-social phenomenon as opposed to irrational religious interpretation, though it does play a role.

Another important discussion by the author is on how our understanding of experiences have become much narrower to only include those who share the same “lived experiences”. In other words, the subjective experience of one group differs from that of another, and thus making it difficult to find common grounds that could unite people of different races, genders, or even nationalities. At the end of the twentieth century, we saw the left’s enthusiasm to uplift minority cultural groups to gain some sort of equality at the expense of individual liberty. It is impossible to downplay the importance of this development; but with it, identity politics now brought a different sets of problem. Fukuyama outlines a number of those problems: 1) identity politics has become an easy way out for policymakers from having to deal with rising inequality; 2) as identity politics focused on the traditionally marginalized, the problems of the majority has not been given adequate attention; 3) the rise of political correctness has limited vital political discourse on identity; 4) polarization in society has increased as identity politics does not appeal to a wide audience; and 5) the rise of identity politics on the left stimulated the same passion on the right. Therefore, while identity politics per se is not a problem, it is how it has been understood and implemented that has brought us to where we are today.

This book is a valuable contribution to the debate on identity, nationalism, and populism. The author’s assertion that the path we are on is not irreversible is due to the nature of identity itself which is that it is not set in stone. However, there is a strong drive for dignity and recognition especially from one’s own government. Interestingly, identity politics entered the vocabulary in the late 1970s and early 1980s and yet, the full-blown impact of it is only being felt now. Is it because it is unfolding in the West? For example, scholars have debated the role of identity formulation to understand the interminable crisis in the Middle East. The different and persistent manifestation of identities in the Middle East have made it difficult for liberal democracy to take foot. This situation perpetuates the rise of authoritarian leaders that pit citizens against one another. So, when the world declares the victory of liberal democracy, the ‘world’ seems to be limited to the West and the rise in identity politics has been considered perplexing. However, to the rest of the non-Western world, identity politics have always been prominent especially in post-colonial societies. This is not a fault of Fukuyama per se, but it is worth pondering.

As the name implies, Identity attempts to be a concise book. Fortunately, it is able to do so without compromising on the wealth of information that is included to help readers understand the phenomenon that is widely reported in the press these days. The narrative style of writing is definitely useful, especially to general readers who may or may not be familiar with research-based writings. However, there were times when the book feels like it has been patched by different anecdotes as some chapters are not equally distributed in length. Nevertheless, the argument is clear, and the author tries his best to appear non-biased in his judgment. There is no doubt that the book is calling for greater awareness by everyone that identity is a social construct and it does not have to be jealously protected. Once creedal identity takes the front seat, liberal democracy may be back on its track to lead us to a possible second end of history.

__________

Reviewer: Mahmood Hossain, PhD Student, Department of International and Strategic Studies, Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences, University of Malaya. Email: mahmood.hossain@gmail.com

One of the most consequential American Presidential elections in recent years saw nominees Hillary Rodham Clinton, the Democrat nominee; and Donald J. Trump, the Republican nominee battle head to head for the honour to occupy the Oval Office. The 2016 Presidential campaign
In This Issue

Editorial Note

Research Articles

Cihat Atar and Shukran Abdul Rahman
Higher Education in Turkey: Responding to Sustainable Development Agenda

Mariyam Shahuneeza Naseer and Dawood Abdulmalek Yahya Al-Hidabi
Quality Assurance in Higher Education in the Maldives: Past, Present, and Future

Shafizan Mohamed and Syed Arabi Idid
Who Sets The Agenda? Locating the Formation of Public Opinion during the Rantau By-Election

Dina Murad
The Socio-Political Context behind the Malayan Insurgency, 1948-1960

Baidruei Hairiel Abd Rahim, Nurazzura Mohamad Dia, Haizuran Mohd Jani, and Abdul Sham Ahmad
Islam and Sport: From Human Experiences to Revelation

Kamaruzzaman Abdul Manan, Che Mahzan Ahmad, Aini Maznina A. Manaf, and Ahmad Shalihin Mohd Samin
Factors Driving the Intention to Adopt a Tobacco-free Policy among Employees in a Public Higher Education Institution

Mohammed Farid Ali al-Fijawi, Maulana Akbar Shah @ U Tun Aung, and Muneer Kuttiyani Muhammad
Violations of Basic Rights of Prisoners In Conventional and Islamic Law: Theory and Practice

Suleyman Temiz, and Arshad Islam
Charismatic Political Leadership and Tun Dr Mahathir Mohamad’s Malaysia: Power, Control, Stability and Defence

Francesca Bocca-Aldaqre
Johann Wolfgang von Goethe: A life With Islām.

Hafiz Zakariya
Major Trends in the Historiography of Muslim Reformism in Pre-Independent Malaysia

Ali Ahmed Zahir
A Critical Analysis of Islamic Council of Europe: From a Juristical and Islamic Legal Maxim Perspective

Abdul Rashid Moten
Kashmir between India Pakistan: The Unfinished Agenda

Nor Razinah Binti Mohd. Zaina, Engku Rabiah Adawiah Engku Alib, Adewale Abideene, and Hamizah Abdul Rahmand
Smart Contract in Blockchain: An Exploration of Legal Framework in Malaysia

Garoot Suleiman Eissa, Elfatih Abdullahi Abdelsalam, and Mohamad Fuzi Bin Omar
South-South Cooperation: A Case Study of Contemporary Sudanese-Malaysian Relations

Roy Anthony Rogers
Diplomatic Ties Between Malaysia and the Holy See: A Symbol of Mutual Respect, Inter-Religious Coexistence and International Cooperation

Review Article

Book Review