Knowledge, Cultural, and Collaborative Learning with Indigenous Communities in Timor Leste project offers an interdisciplinary platform to attract local researchers, postgraduate students, industry partners and academicians to uncover and explore the field of HCI, learn about design and user experience methodologies employed in HCI, and contextualize them to TL. The project also enables interactions between local researchers and prominent HCI researchers for knowledge exchange. It includes a series of workshops and webinars to be attended by local Indigenous researchers, students and prominent regional and international HCI community members for cross-cultural learning.
