Islamic Architecture
Its philosophy, spiritual significance & some early developments

SPAHIC OMER
Islamic Architecture
Its philosophy, spiritual significance & some early developments

BY: SPAHIC OMER

Published by A.S. NOORDEEN
Contents

Introduction ............................................................................................................ ix

1
Towards an Understanding of Islamic Architecture

Introduction ............................................................................................................ 1
The meaning of Islamic architecture ................................................................. 1
Islamic architecture as a means, not an end ...................................................... 8
Two examples: the Islamic house and the mosque
  The house ................................................................................................. 21
  The mosque ............................................................................................ 27
Practicing and teaching Islamic architecture today ........................................................................................................... 35
Islamic versus Muslim architecture ............................................................... 43
The Qusayr al-Amra palace as an example .................................................... 48

2
A Conceptual Framework for Islamic Architecture

Introduction ............................................................................................................ 57
Tawhid (God's Oneness) .................................................................................. 59
The implications of tawhid for architecture .................................................. 63
Man as the vicegerent (khalifah) on earth ....................................................... 75
The relationship between the vicegerent (khalifah) and environment ........................................... 77
Environment as Allah's faithful servant ....................... 81
The implications of the concept of man as the vicegerent (khalifah) on earth for architecture .... 86
Comprehensive excellence (ihsan) ................................. 96
The implications of comprehensive excellence for architecture ......................................................... 98
Islam as the final and universal revelation ........... 108
The implications of Islam as the final and universal revelation for architecture ........................... 115

3

Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) and Islamic Architecture

Introduction ............................................................................ 125
Islam and society ................................................................. 126
The Qur'an and the Prophet's sunnah (traditions) as the foundation of Islamic architecture ........ 130
Islam and the categorization of building activities ................................................................. 136
Prophet Muhammad's attitude towards architecture ......................................................... 141
Building mosques for Allah ................................................. 144
Mosque decoration ............................................................... 147
Building activities over graves ........................................... 152
Building houses .................................................................. 154
Some of the Prophet's disapproving traditions on building .................................................... 164
The Prophet's mosque as an epitome of the Prophet's contribution to the evolution of the identity of Islamic architecture ................................................................. 170
Function-form relationship .................................................. 175
Respect for the environment .............................................. 178
Cleanliness ......................................................................... 182
Comprehensive excellence ................................................ 183
Promoting just social interactions ...................................... 185 “La darar wa la dirar” (There is no inflicting or returning of harm) .......................................................... 189
Indigenous versus foreign influences ................................. 193

4

Islamic Architecture after Prophet
Muhammad (pbuh)

Introduction ........................................................................ 200
The genesis of Islamic architecture and the genesis of Islamic civilization ............................................. 202
The Umayyads .................................................................. 214
The first Abbasid period .................................................... 231 Islamic architecture and the Islamization of the community ........................................................................... 253 Establishing tolerant relations with non-Muslims as a segment of the Islamization of the community ................................................................ 259
A “prelude” to Islamic architecture .................................... 265
First category: The austere Muslim buildings ............... 266
Second category: Transforming churches and temples into mosques .................................................. 275
First example: the Great Umayyad Mosque in Damascus ........................................................................... 283 Second example: the Persian Īwān (Hall) in al-Madāʾin or Ctesiphon ....................................................... 306
Avoiding architectural deviations ................................. 311
Following in religion vis-à-vis inventing in civilization ................................................................... 318
The case of the caliph Muʿawiyah b. Abi Sufyan... 324